

Former USMR Reps now with BWMA.....

I like BWMA because I never knew that there would be so many ways to get homeowners signed up! Wow! I love BWMA and their training is simply awesome. USMR who?

I like the marketing efforts much better here at BWMA.

Great Opportunity!!! You have access to a mentorship program, weekly training calls, and the ability to make more $$$$. Best of all how would you like to have a homeowner start today, without any out-of-the-pocket expense? Come on in the water is fine.

I have to say that there is a large difference between USMR and BWMA. One example is.....USMR claims they are there to support you with what ever you may need to help you. I found out very quickly that for the "help", like pamphlets or hand outs they were there to help but, like all the other help it cost you!

BWMA is a little different. YOU DON'T PAY! everything is in your starter kit, even Brochures you can print out yourself, at very little cost.

As far as other training? This Company is for real and have a real support staff that are there to help you with anything. If you are having a hard time closing the Sale, you talk to a real person who will really help you.

In short, BWMA is a Company that is there to help you make money not to use you so they can make money by selling you a disk or a "down load"!!! And guess what? The words in their Brochures, etc. are spelled correctly too!

You really don't realize the differences between USMR and the Biweekly Mortgage Association until after you join BWMA. Then you will see how you can actually make more money with BWMA. I am personally recruiting a large sales team of BWMA Members and have a nice group already. I like to leverage my time and by providing support to my team, in addition to the fine support from BWMA, it helps my team become successful. I wish I would have found BWMA in the first place.

When I joined USMR in 1997 it was a good company, but they did not understand that homeowners, as well as Consultants in the field, need options. BWMA provided me with the options and the tools so my mortgage reduction business would prosper. There are other biweekly companies out there, but no other company has it together like BWMA and they keep improving all the time. Experience really is the best teacher. To the next 24 years!
